PARENTING AND CHILDREN'S WELLBEING

Abstract

Parents are the pillars in a child's development right from the time they are brought into this world. The process of parenting and its methods have been changing over and over, as years pass by. And by observing for the past 100 years, it has been changing due to the influence of beliefs, attitudes and practices regarding parenting. New views are in cultivated as advices, to the parents; by the professionals. Parenting is understood as a skill that is natural and innate but reality, all parents do not have the needed expertise. Parenting as a process, is expected to bring in an outcome of child's preparedness for independent living. Literature shows that a child's physical, emotional, social, psychological, cognitive and moral development is determined strongly by both heredity and environment. Both these factors, are directly connected to parent and parenting. This paper will examine the factors linked with the right parenting for the holistic development of a child.

Keywords: parenting, children, wellbeing, parenting style, holistic development, positive parenting, functional parenting.

Parenting focuses on wholesome development and it not only involves the physical but the emotional and social aspects of a parent into the parenting process. This art of parenting has been understood through different styles based on the parents as persons and the need as Authoritative, Permissive, Neglectful, Democratic, Autocratic, laissez-faire etc. Parenting is the most evolved emotion of the rational 'human hood', because it is a complicated phase for which everyone is not ready and, many a times, it is learning by doing on the trial and error method.

Parenting is not merely a biological connection and definitely not just an act of bringing a child. It is an unseen bond and unsaid promise to be there regardless. This unconditional acceptance and availability for the child, can be done only when every child is considered unique. Child-centered parenting happens in many modern households today with single child, understanding it as the best method. A child centered parenting is a parenting that is organized around the needs and interests of child rather than those of parent. A parent following this type of approach, gives equal rights for their children and they play less authoritative roles in their lives. This enhances a child's natural creativity and a sense of initiative. It also needs to be understood that children exposed to this kind of parenting alone, develop a barrier of resistance, to any critical comments. This happens because parents are never critical because of the fear of ruining the self-esteem of their children. These children tend to grow up self-centered and lack the skills of having good social relationships. As adults, they are not able to manage and adjust because, children everything revolved around them. They may even find hard integrating themselves into a community where they are not the central focus.

THEORETICAL PERSPECTIVES:

Lot of research has happened to identify parenting practices and its influences on child development. Based on this, many theories have developed. There are 4 kinds of parenting styles namely: authoritarian (cooler and more

All are welcome !!!

The 2nd M.A.HRM students team along with the faculty coordinator Dr B. Sasikala reached the destination, Sri Devi Arts and Science College around 10:30 am. Guidance was given to our team by their coordinators and faculty members. The team of trainers witnessed a great setup of the PA systems, Projectors and most importantly a great number of students (the trainees) from the BBA department of Sri Devi Arts and Science College.

Dr. B. Sasikala - Faculty Co-Ordinator - facilitating the gathering

The Inaugural session commenced around 11:00 am, with the presence of the Principal of the college—Dr. V. Lakshmipathy, Secretary—Mr. P. Ramesh, HOD & the faculties of Department of Business Administration & IQAC. The college offered our team a very warm welcome. The Principal and Director of the college delivered an enlightening speech to everyone present over there. Followed by our faculty coordinator conveyed her words of wisdom and knowledge.

KUMAR,STUDENT,

II MA HRM delivered a speech on “People Management”

The first session was conducted by master Manoj Kumar, 2nd M.A.HRM. The trainer provided the audience with an insight about our initiative “PATH” and gave a brief introduction about his topic “People management”. The trainer delivered a great session on how to effectively work with others at the workplace in the context of an organisation. He mostly covered various facets of people management namely the skills required to manage individuals, handling of individuals development and perceptions on resolving problems. He also laid much emphasis on the prerequisites for developing a key behaviour of a great people manager by learning how to engage a team and colleagues. The trainer also shared much information on emotional intelligence and also do’s and don’ts in people management. He helped the trainees learn to build a personal connection with team members and build a positive climate in the organisation.

Master Davis P

The second session was taken over by master Davis Panna, 2nd M.A.HRM. The trainers' session was concerned with the topic “Self—Esteem”. The trainer delivered insights into the subject matter which primarily focused on ensuring that students of Sri Devi College gain a positive self—image and self—concept in the long run with a constant zeal towards self—affirmation and self—love. The trainer made trainees understand that every individual is unique and has a separate identity. He covered various dimensions of self—esteem and incorporated various practices to deliver the best results. He showcased video presentations on the topic. The trainer informed the trainees about different types of self—esteem and the impact it has on individuals' daily life. He provided the students' numerous ways to develop one's self-confidence. The trainer also provided them worksheets on developing their Self—esteem. It was a motivating session for the fellow trainees where they absorbed the knowledge on boosting one self—esteem with various practices.

The third session was carried out by Master Steve Dsylvia, 2nd M.A.HRM. The trainer shared information to the trainees about the introduction to conflict management, its importance of resolving conflicts, different conflict management styles, developing awareness, managing individuals to prevent conflict, the importance of clear communication to abate the conflicts. The trainer emphasized finding the root cause of conflicts, preventing resentment from lingering and conflicts from occurring to the trainees. He also shared some important information on when to intervene and how to approach conflict management resolution by establishing fundamental guidelines and procedures. Moreover, the trainer made the trainee understand how to create a psychologically safe work environment that encourages open communication and trust. Moreover, an activity was carried out which was exclusively a debate for the fellow trainees concerning conflict management, where active participation from the trainees was much visible.

The fourth session was conducted by Miss Jessica Audrey Nelthropp, 2nd M.A.HRM. The trainer took over the session on the topic “Interview Navigation”. Detailed information was shared with the trainees on how to plan, prepare and go about for an interview. The trainer gave the trainees fundamental guidelines and suggestions on preparing for breaking through an interview. The key attributes were shared with the trainees where they learnt what the hiring managers seek in the job applicants and how they can best manage themselves in the interview process. The trainer also shared frequently asked questions during the face to face interview and to answer best to their ability using various methodologies namely, “STAR” and “STOP”. Moreover, the trainees learnt numerous important steps and measures for stress-free interview that will help aid the trainees in futuristic events.

Master Jonathan Andrew Nelthropp, II MA HRM delivered a speech on “MOCK INTERVIEW”

The fifth session was taken up by Master Jonathan Andrew Nelthropp, 2nd M.A.HRM. The trainer conducted the session on the topic “Mock Interview”. He imparted knowledge on the different levels of the interview process. In addition to that, the trainer gave valuable tips to be followed during the interview process. The trainees were allowed to experience the seven most difficult questions asked during an interview, where they tried to solve the questions. This session mirrored to some extent an actual job interview scenarios where the trainees derived much knowledge and important points to consider when dealing with the real interviews.

Group Picture with HOD (BBA dept.),
Principal (Sri Devi College), Faculty
Coordinator and Student trainers

Finally, the session came to an end around 1:30 pm. This was followed by sharing of the gratification by the Sri Devi Arts And Science College, the Department of Business Administration to the faculty coordinator Dr B. Sasikala and the trainers, the team of five from M.A.HRM—II. Followed by a feedback session.

Sri Devi Arts And Science College offered great lunch to the guest trainers and faculty coordinator. They appreciated their offer and enjoyed their lunch. Followed by a visit to the Principal's office, where the principal presented our faculty coordinator a certificate for serving them as their chief guest for the training session along with the acknowledgement certificates to the trainers. Finally, the first PATH event became a gigantic success and the objective of this initiative was fulfilled. We Journeyed back home with a great sense of positivity, gratitude and satisfaction.
