Report:

The quality of Higher Education depends on the quality of the teacher. Today teachers play various roles such as Tutors, Researcher, Mentor & Counsellor etc, This FDP provided knowledge and experience sharing by the experts in the areas viz., teaching, research, learning process, classroom Management etc to achieve excellence in their profession and provide better service to the student community.

Outcome

There were 115 participants registered for the Five-day International Faculty Development Program from different colleges and from different parts of the country. This national initiative was able to disseminate teaching skills training, research knowledge to large numbers of faculty at modest cost. This programme helped the academicians in improving the academic performance of faculty with resultant enrichment of learners' knowledge and skills.

Outcome of the programme:

The Programme aims to bring together academicians, researchers and industry professionals from all over the world. The highlight of the programme is to give opportunity to researchers and academicians to develop researching and writing skills, to understand the methodologies of research and to make them self-reliant. This FDP will help participants to have strong research knowledge in all areas of research writing.

REPORT FOR THE YEAR 2020 – 2021

Name of the programme: Three Days International FDP On Enhancing Knowledge & Skill

Objectives of the Programme: Community engagement can be incorporated into courses in a myriad of ways, from small optional service activities that complement other learning activities within a course, to required time-intensive projects that are the center piece of a course plan dedicated more fully to community engagement. Despite the exceptional learning opportunity that service learning presents, adhering to these principles can be challenging, especially when faculty may be new to a community and fear the time commitment or work required. To best address these challenges, it is important to consider several resources. First, use existing resources at your institution, particularly Centers for Teaching and Learning, Public Service Centers, and peers who are engaged in community work.

Report of the programme:

About the programme:

Teaching students to apply knowledge and skills to benefit others or serve the public good is one exceptionally high impact method to foster these capabilities across the disciplines (1). Service learning, as it is typically called, is pedagogy that weds learning goals and community needs in scholarly service projects that, when done well, enhance both student learning and community development. Or, according to Janet Eyler, it is "a form of experiential education where learning occurs through a cycle of action and reflection as students…seek to achieve real objectives for the community and deeper understanding and skills for themselves" The benefits of community engagement are well documented in the scholarship on teaching and learning for students, faculty, and community partners. Students achieve greater intellectual development in the form of deeper knowledge of the discipline, problem-solving capacities, critical thinking, and abilities to understand complexity and ambiguity, but also greater personal and social growth through enhanced personal efficacy, moral reasoning, interpersonal skills, intercultural competencies, commitments to social service, and even career development. Faculty also find greater satisfaction with student learning, new research opportunities and collaborations, not to mention stronger ties to their community. Of course, when done well community engagement also benefits community partners with improved capacities to research and resolve social problems, and more supportive campus-community relations. Together, these outcomes support a more dynamic public scholarship and civic engagement for higher education; one that, not only supports student development, but also the more collaborative civic learning and problem solving necessary to improve our collective capacities for democracy and well-being.

Feedback – report

Feedback from the participants was collected through Google Forms which were posted on the portal after each session on a daily basis. Participants gave their Feedback on various parameters like content of the session; rating the resource persons on criteria like subject knowledge, application of updated information, communication skills; overall increase in level of knowledge after the session, etc. The responses were evaluated to identify problems, if any, and ensure timely rectification. The comments by the participants provided an insight to the organizers regarding various dimensions of the functioning of the Programme. Almost 90% of the participants found the LMS to be highly effective and very good. Approximately 92% of the participants responded that the LMS had a user-friendly interface. The timely resolution of queries also received a high rating, wherein a majority of the participants were satisfied with prompt response through mails and various other communication platforms like Telegram, Whatsapp, phone calls, etc. The participants rated the overall knowledge addition to the topics covered, after attending the Programme, to be good with majority rating it to be excellent. In a nutshell, the Feedback received from the participants has been very constructive and overwhelming. The participants affirmed that the Programme was highly valuable, beneficial, suitable for teachers and overall a good learning experience

Outcome of the programme:

Online community engagement entails both challenges and opportunities. The challenges of conducting ethical and effective community engagement projects in online courses are significant. When faculty cannot choose partners or meet them face to face, and when online students are non-traditional and have full time employment, partnerships and projects may suffer from inadequate time, development, and impact. However, online community engagement does have the opportunity to have a varied set of projects with national and international reach, which allows students to address diverse needs across wide-ranging communities. Having non-traditional students also affords opportunities for intriguing dialogues about any number of issues affecting national or global society.

Faculty Development Program – 'Media and Future'- 17th to 19th June 2020

School of Media Studies organized a three days faculty development program from 17th June 2020 to 19th June 2020 on "MEDIA AND FUTURE". The program had three resource persons handling topics of their expertise. Participants from various colleges and universities registered for the faculty development program. The program enriched the participants with great knowledge on Media and Future.

The first day of faculty development programme was inaugurated by Mr. Ahamed Rasool, Assistant Professor and Head, School of Media Studies, Patrician College of Arts and Science. The program started with prayer and introduction of resource person Dr. Susan Sridhar, Associate Professor, School of Communication and Media Studies, MOP Vaishnav College for Women. The resource person started the session by exploring the topic "IS SOCIAL MEDIA THE FUTURE?" She delivered her valuable inputs on social media platform and how its utilization in daily life. The usage of social media to receive news and connect with people was discussed after which the forum was open for discussion. Questions were raised on how people are glued to a particular social media platform and on the accuracy of information disseminated in it. The resource person gave her detailed inputs for the queries raised. She also said the news disseminated in social media cannot be accurate all the time and the user can compare it with other traditional media. The program ended with vote of thanks to the resource person for the day.

The second day of faculty development program started with prayer and introduction of the resource person. Dr.T.Jaisakthivel, Assistant Professor, Department of Journalism and Communication, University of Madras, Chennai was the resource person. The topic for the day was "FUTURE OF RADIO". The resource person gave his valuable inputs on radio and how the radio communication development will be in future. The resource person detailed on the different radio stations in India and the need of radio communication during the time of uncertainty. He also gave ideas for the participants to start their own radio station using internet and audio devices. He shared his experience on visiting various radio stations and how radio communication can be developed in future. The program was then open for discussion and many of the participants eagerly raised queries on starting their own radio channel. The program ended with vote of thanks to the resource person.

The third day of faculty development programme started with prayer and introduction of resource person. Dr. Vijay Kumar Vijayan was the resource person for the day. He is working as an Assistant Professor in the School of Communications, Xavier University, Bhubaneswar, India. The topic for the day was Audio-Visual Production & Beyond. The resource person gave a detailed talk about how media content attracts the audience. He gave live assignments to the participants through polling method. He also spoke on some of the popular applications that are used for creating media content. It was followed by participants' discussion on media content creation for different audience. The resource person explained on audience approach and expectation on various social media platforms. The program ended with vote of thanks.

The three days faculty development program ended on 19th June 2020. The total number of participants was around 35 on all the three days. Feedback form for three day program was sent to the participants. All the participants gave their valuable feedback on the program. The participants gave a high rating for the experience they gained through the program. They also suggested conducting more programs in future. E-Certificate was sent to all participants who actively engaged themselves in the program.
