Place: National Institute for Empowerment of Persons with Multiple Disabilities, Kovalam, SH 49, Post, Muthukadu, Tamil Nadu 603112

Subject: Summary of students visit to National Institute for Empowerment of Persons with Multiple Disabilities.

Patrician College Of Arts and Science, Department of Psychology organized a field visit to National Institute for Empowerment of Persons with Multiple Disabilities (NIEPMED) for the MSC 1st year Students. All students with our Professor Mrs. Nivedha assembled in the campus and started our journey to NIEPMED by 9.30a.m. in the bus organized by the department of Psychology with a total strength of 21 students and 1 Professor. We reached NIEPMED around 10.40a.m. and the introduction were given by our guide in NIEPMED.

In the Introduction He helped us to become aware of the purpose and value of NIEPMED by stating how it focuses on various/ multiple disabilities. He gave a quick summary on what all the disabilities and disorders that were being treated in NIEPMED. Some of the disabilities and disorders that were treated in NIEPMED were Blindness, Low-vision, Hearing Impairment (deaf and hard of hearing), Locomotor Disability, Autism Spectrum Disorder, Cerebral Palsy, Chronic Neurological conditions, Specific Learning Disabilities, Speech and Language disability, Multiple Disabilities including deaf blindness, violence victims, Parkinson's disease, Autism, Cerebral Palsy and many more Multiple Disabilities.

He also explained the processes that has to be gone through by clients before their therapy sessions. At reception the staff starts the process of registration by collecting all the details of the client and categorises them. The process of registration is completed by collecting the registration charges and service charges as per the NIEPMD fee structure and then the clients are sent to social work professionals for taking up the case history. The staff at reception also guide the clients to other departments for further treatments and follow up sessions.

After registration, case history is undertaken Case History enables the professional to communicate with the patient about his/her symptoms, felling and fears so as to obtain an insight into the nature of patients present and past illness. The data is collected concerning an individual, his/her family, and environment. It includes the medical history, antenatal natal and postnatal history, developmental history, immunization history, school history and family dynamics and other information that may be use full in analysing and diagnosing the case instructional or research purpose. Once the case history is collected, then the client will be referred to other departments for specific assessment and intervention.

Some of the departments in NIEPMED were department of clinical psychology, department of medical science, department of social work, department of special education and department of speech, hearing and communication. Later we were given an orientation for each service they provide and we were also led to see those machines and instruments they use in order to give therapy.

Physical therapy: Physiotherapy included certain exercises, massages and treatments based on physical stimuli.

Occupational therapy: This helps to enable people to participate in the activities of everyday life, which include day-to-day tasks such as self-care, work, or leisure.

Sensory Integration was used to help children learn to use all their senses together and improve challenging behaviour or repetitive behaviour.

Early Intervention Services: This involves services and supports that are available to babies and young children (0-3 years) with developmental delays and disabilities and their families.

Prosthetics and Orthotics, in this they focused more on how a person adapts to Prosthetics by physical therapies.

Special education, in this they explained how disabled children are provided education.

Speech, Hearing & Communication, they explained on how speech therapy focuses on voice and speech-language skills, while hearing therapy deals with hearing and hearing impairment.

Deafblind, this is where children as well adults who are disabled are taught braille etc.

With all these orientations as well a view around each department we ended our field trip by 12 p.m. After finishing our lunch, we started our journey back by 1 p.m. All students reached safe back home and had a very useful purposeful field visit in NIEPMED.

INDUSTRIAL VISIT REPORT

KDHP Co. PVT. Ltd.

MADUPATTY FACTORY

Company Profile

Carrying forward a lineage that dates back over 136 years to the British Colonial Raj era, the Kanan Devan Hills Plantations Company Private Limited (KDHP) succeeded Tata Tea Limited on 1st April, 2005, when the latter exited most of its plantations in Munnar to focus on the growth of its branded tea business. During the year 2004-2005, owing to the general crisis prevalent in the tea industry at the time, Tata Tea Ltd restructured and came up with a proposal to transfer its holdings in the Kanan Devan Hills Village. This was done as part of a restructuring exercise evolved through a detailed study, particularly taking note of the prevalent crisis in the tea industry.

Thus, the Kanan Devan Hills Plantations Company was formed, making it the largest employee-owned tea company in the world. Encompassing the Participatory Management System of operations, where the shareholders of the company are mainly its employees – a novel concept in the plantation industry credited to the farsighted vision of the company's Founding Managing Director, Late. Mr. T.V. Alexander – about 60% of the subscribed share capital of the company is held by its employees, and almost 99.9% of its employees are shareholders of the company. With 12,000 plus employees and 12 departments governing the various functional areas of the company, KDHP covers a total area of 23,783 hectares, all located in the High Ranges of Idukki District in Kerala. As the largest tea corporation in South India, the company also occupies a prestigious place on the tea map of Kerala, constituting 24.3% of the total tea area in the State and accounting for 31.5% of the production in the State.

A unique feature of the Kanan Devan hills Plantations Company Pvt Ltd is the implementation of the Participatory Management System, introduced with a view to ensure full participation of the employees in the management of the company. As part of this three-tier structure that encompasses all the sections of the employees of the company, one worker representative and one staff representative are nominated as Directors on the Board of the company. The employees identified as the Best Worker and Best Staff in a year are nominated to the Board during the following financial year.

OBJECTIVE OF INDUSTRIAL VISIT

- To introduce students with the workplace practices necessary for employment in a company.
 - To visualize all the locations through gaining an awareness of the factory working environment, such as a tea factory.

REPORT:

The Department of Commerce arranged an industrial visit to Munnar Tea factory for the final year B.COM G student on 07/02/2023. The students were accompanied by the Two faculty members of the department-Dr.Sweety Regina Mary (HOD),and Mr.Janardanam Assistant Professor. The students visited the tea factory and museum and got to know many interesting facts related to the process of manufacturing tea and all other related aspects of selling and distribution. The KDHP Tea Museum is an industry and history museum situated in Munnar, a town in the Idukki district of Kerala in South India. Tata Tea Museum is its official name, but it's also known as Nalluthanni Estate where it is located, or Kannan Devan Hills Plantation (KDHP) Tea Museum. It started in 1905 and is now a fully automotive factory. The tea museum preserves aspects on the genesis and growth of tea plantations in Kerala. The museum houses curiosities, photographs and machinery, depicting a turning point that contributed to Idukki's flourishing tea industry. Different processes through which the tea is processed were witnessed by the students at various stages of the tea processing such as Crush, tear, curl – and learn about the production of Kerala black tea variants. A section of the museum also houses classic bungalow furniture and office equipment of the Colonial area in Kerala, model of rail engine operated in 1924..The.They also acknowledge the history of Munnar by going through the history of tea gardens in Munnar. The students were provided with a facility for purchasing different varieties of tea and enjoyed a cup of delicious freshly prepared tea.

OUTCOME OF THE VISIT

1. Industrial visits provide the students with an opportunity to learn practically through interaction, working methods and employment practices.
2. It gives the students an exposure to current work practices as opposed to theoretical knowledge being taught at their college classrooms.
3. Industrial visits grant the students a great opportunity to interact with industries and know more about industrial environment.
4. Industrial visits are arranged by colleges for their respective students with an objective of providing them an opportunity to explore the different industry sectors like IT, manufacturing, services, finance and marketing.
5. Industrial visit helps students to combine their theoretical knowledge of business operations with the practical knowledge of its actual functioning.

INDUSTIRIAL VISIT – III B.COM G 2020-2023 BATCH

Sweater India Private Ltd, Salem - 15th Feb 2023

ABOUT THE COMPANY:

Sweaters India Private Ltd in Gorimedu, Salem is known to satisfactorily cater to the demands of its customer base. The business came into existence in 2009 and has, since then, been a known name in its field. It is classified as Non-Govt company and is registered at Registrar of Companies, Coimbatore. Sweaters India Pvt Ltd. is a Tamil Nadu based Manufacture of wearing apparel, dressing and dyeing of fur. Both regular and contract activities are included

OBJECTIVES OF THE VISIT:

Main aim of industrial visit is to provide an exposure to students about practical working environment. They also provide students a good opportunity to gain full awareness about industrial practices. Through industrial visits students get awareness about new technology.

OUTCOME OF THE VISIT:

Industrial trips help students to enhance their interpersonal, communication skills, and teamwork abilities. Finally, these industrial visits provide the students much-needed break from the usual melancholic theory classes, and students get a chance to engage in practical learning. The students get an opportunity to learn something outside the four walls of their college. With regular industrial visits, the students are able to identify their prospective area of work like marketing, finance, logistics, etc. This also gives students a platform to enhance their interpersonal skills

Report on the Programme:

On Feb 07th we started our journey from college at 3.30 Pm .we reached our Destination at 4.30 am on 08/02/2023.One guide was arranged for us he explained about the Tea Factory and process of making the Tea.

About the company

Carrying forward a lineage that dates back over 136 years to the British Colonial Raj era, the Kanan Devan Hills Plantations Company Private Limited (KDHP) succeeded Tata Tea Limited on 1st April, 2005, when the latter exited most of its plantations in Munnar to focus on the growth of its branded tea business. During the year 2004-2005, owing to the general crisis prevalent in the tea industry at the time, Tata Tea Ltd restructured and came up with a proposal to transfer its holdings in the Kanan Devan Hills Village. This was done as part of a restructuring exercise evolved through a detailed study, particularly taking note of the prevalent crisis in the tea industry.

Thus, the Kanan Devan Hills Plantations Company was formed, making it the largest employee-owned tea company in the world. Encompassing the Participatory Management System of operations, where the shareholders of the company are mainly its employees – a novel concept in the plantation industry credited to the farsighted vision of the company's Founding Managing Director, Late.

Mr. T.V. Alexander – about 60% of the subscribed share capital of the company is held by its employees, and almost 99.9% of its employees are shareholders of the company.

ABSTRACT

Geriatric depression is a growing global problem. In India, 30 per cent of the 103 million people above the age of 60 display symptoms of depression, according to a recent government survey. It estimated that 8.3 per cent of the country's elderly population have probable major depression. This means, one in every 12 elderly persons in the country have had depression. It affects the quality of life and functional ability of the geriatric population.

Objectives

- To study the socio demographic profile of the respondents.
- To examine the quality of life among respondents.
- To understand the level of depression among respondents.
- To analyze the relationship between quality of life and the level of depression among respondents.

Design and Methods

The study will use a descriptive research method and adopt a snowball sampling to identify the respondents. Older People's Quality of Life (OPQOL) questionnaire developed by Ann Bowling and Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS) developed by J.A. Yesavage and colleagues in 1982 was used to measure the Quality of Life and Depression respectively.

Results & Conclusion

The findings of the study will be explained during the presentation. Supportive environment for elderly plays a major role in determining better quality of life. Depression can be prevented by improving the elderly population's quality of life.

CHAPTER-1

INTRODUCTION

The number of senior citizens is constantly rising throughout the world. According to the report "Elderly in India 2021," there will be 138 million older people in India in 2021, 67 million of them will be men and 71 million of whom will be women. This figure is anticipated to rise by 56 million by the year 2031. The concept of quality of life (QOL) has several levels and dimensions. The elderly are becoming even more important as society ages and the demographics change. There are signs that elderly adults have distinct worries about QOL than the general population. Elderly caretakers are still learning the fundamentals of old care, and there is little awareness of the unique needs of the elderly (physical and mental health, psychological and social support). (Gupta et al., 2014). Additionally, depression may have a negative impact on quality of life (QOL). The WHO defines QOL as "individuals' view of their situation in life in relation to their objectives, aspirations, standards, and worries, and in the context of the culture and value systems in which they live.(Sivertsen et al., 2015). The health care system is greatly challenged by the ageing population. The decline in an older person's functional mobility, ongoing medical issues, social isolation, and other stressors have a detrimental effect on their mental health. Chronic conditions such coronary heart disease, cancer, diabetes mellitus, and hypertension are more common in geriatric populations with depression. Older people desire activities that boost their sense of worth, physical activity, and respectful treatment. These people claim to have a high quality of life (QOL). Healthy ageing lessens the negative consequences of ageing. It improves older people's quality of life and lowers their risk of developing depressed. (Vijayalakshmi & Thirunavukarasu, 2022)

The word geriatrics was introduced by the Austrian-born U.S. physician Ignatz Leo Nascher (1863-1944) in the article "Geriatrics," New York Journal of Medicine, (August 21, 1909), "Geriatrics, from geras, old age, and iatrikos, relating to the physician, is a term I would suggest as an addition to our vocabulary, to cover the same field in old age that is covered by the term paediatrics in childhood. Since most medical care is devoted to those over 65, geriatrics, the medical treatment of the elderly, is a highly important specialty. The specific problems of the elderly include physical inactivity and instability, which result from weakness and loss of energy. Weakness of the eyes and ears plays a role, and weakening of the immune system often leads to more disease. All these conditions can be made worse by mental problems, such as declining intellectual activity, declining memory, and depression, which may prevent the patient from taking action to improve his or her condition. But the effects of aging can be greatly relieved by proper care. And the greatest improvement often results when the patient is persuaded to become more physically, mentally, and socially active.

Old age is the range of ages nearing and surpassing the life expectancy of human beings; it is the end of the human life cycle. Terms, some of them euphemisms, for people at this age include old people, the elderly (worldwide usage), OAPs (British for Old Age Pensioner), seniors, senior citizens (American), older adults (in the social sciences), and elders (many cultures).

Old people often have limited regenerative abilities and are more susceptible to disease, syndromes, injuries, and other illnesses than younger adults. Some disciplines and domains focus on the aging and the aged, such as the organic processes of aging (senescence), medical studies of the aging process (gerontology), diseases that afflict older adults (geriatrics), technology to support the aging society (gerontechnology), and leisure and sport activities adapted to older people (such as senior sport). The elderly face social problems related to retirement, loneliness, and ageism.

Old age is not a definite biological stage: the chronological age denoted as "old age" varies culturally and historically.

In 2011, the United Nations proposed a human-rights convention to protect old people.

Most developed Western countries set the retirement age between 62 and 67; this is also generally considered to mark the transition from middle to old age. Having one's age within this range is commonly a requirement to become eligible for senior social programs. In non-Western nations, old age can begin as early as the mid-40s or as late as the 70s.

Old age cannot be universally defined because it is context-sensitive. The United Nations, for example, considers old age to be 60 years or older. In contrast, a 2001 joint report by the U.S. National Institute on Aging and the World Health Organization [WHO] Regional Office for Africa set the beginning of old age in Sub-Saharan Africa at 50. This lower threshold stems primarily from a different way of thinking about old age in developing nations. Unlike in the developed world, where chronological age determines retirement, societies in developing countries determine old age according to a person's ability to make active contributions to society. This number is also significantly affected by lower life expectancy rates throughout the developing world.

Senior citizen

Senior citizen is a common euphemism for an old person used in American English, and sometimes in British English. It implies that the person being referred to is retired. This in turn usually implies that the person is over the retirement age, which varies according to country. Synonyms include old age pensioner or pensioner in British English, and retiree and senior in American English. Some dictionaries describe widespread use of "senior citizen" for people over the age of 65.

When defined in a legal context, senior citizen is often used for legal or policy-related reasons in determining who is eligible for certain benefits available to the age group.

It is used in general usage instead of traditional terms such as "old person", "old-age pensioner", or "elderly" as a courtesy and to signify continuing relevance of and respect for this population group as "citizens" of society, of senior "rank".

The term was apparently coined in 1938 during a political campaign. Famed caricaturist Al Hirschfeld claimed on several occasions that his father Isaac Hirschfeld invented the term "senior citizen". It has come into widespread use in recent decades in legislation, commerce, and common speech. Especially in less formal contexts, it is often abbreviated as "senior(s)", which is also used as an adjective.

Age qualification

The age which qualifies for senior citizen status varies widely. In governmental contexts, it is usually associated with an age at which pensions or medical benefits for the elderly become available. In commercial contexts, where it may serve as a marketing device to attract customers, the age is often significantly lower.

In commerce, some businesses offer customers of a certain age a "senior discount". The age at which these discounts are available varies from 55, 60, 62 or 65 upwards, and other criteria may also apply. Sometimes a special "senior discount card" or other proof of age needs to be produced to show entitlement.

In India, the standard retirement age is currently 60 (gradually increasing to 65).

In Canada, the OAS (Old Age Security) pension is available at 65 (the Conservative government of Stephen Harper had planned to gradually increase the age of eligibility to 67, starting in the years 2023–2029, although the Liberal government of Justin Trudeau is considering leaving it at 65), and the CPP (Canada Pension Plan) as early as age 60.

Physical marks of old age include the following:

- Bone and joint problems: Old bones are marked by "thinning and shrinkage". This might result in a loss of height (about two inches (5 cm) by age 80), a stooping posture in many people, and a greater susceptibility to bone and joint diseases such as osteoarthritis and osteoporosis.
- Chronic diseases: Some older people have at least one chronic condition and many have multiple conditions. In 2007–2009, the most frequently occurring conditions among older people in the United States were uncontrolled hypertension (34%), arthritis (50%), and heart disease (32%).
- Chronic mucus hypersecretion (CMH), defined as "coughing and bringing up sputum", is a common respiratory symptom in elderly people.
- Dental problems: Older people may have less saliva and reduced ability to maintain oral hygiene, consequently increasing the chance of tooth decay and infection.
- Digestive system issues: About 40% of the time, old age is marked by digestive disorders such as difficulty in swallowing, inability to eat enough and to absorb nutrition, constipation and bleeding.
- Essential tremor (ET): An uncontrollable shaking in a part of the upper body. It is more common in the elderly and symptoms worsen with age.
- Eyesight deterioration: Presbyopia can occur by age 50 and it hinders reading, especially of small print in low lighting. The speed with which an individual reads and the ability to locate objects may also be impaired. By age 80, more than half of all Americans either have a cataract or have had cataract surgery.
- Falls: Old age increases the risk of injury from falls. Every year, about a third of those 65 years old and more than half of those 80 years old fall. Falls are the leading cause of injury and death for old people.
- Gait change: Some aspects of gait normally change with old age. Speed slows after age 70. Time with both feet on the ground ("double stance") increases. Old people sometimes move as if they were walking carefully on ice.
- Hair usually turns gray and may become thinner. About age 50, about 50% of Europeans have 50% grey hair. Many men are affected by balding.
- Women enter menopause.

- Hearing loss: By age 75, 48% of men and 37% of women have lost at least some significant hearing. Of the 26.7 million people [where?] over age 50 with a hearing impairment, one seventh use hearing aids. In the 70–79 age range, partial hearing loss affecting communication rises to 65%, mostly in low-income men.
- Hearts can become less efficient in old age, lessening stamina. Atherosclerosis can constrict blood flow.
- Immune-function loss (Immunosenescence).
- Lungs may expand less efficiently, providing less oxygen.
- Mobility impairment or loss: "Impairment in mobility affects 14% of those between 65 and 74, [and] half of those over 85." Loss of mobility is common in old people and has serious "social, psychological, and physical consequences".
- Pain: 25% of seniors have chronic pain, increasing with age, up to 80% of those in nursing homes. Most pains are rheumatological or malignant.
- Decreases in sexual drive in both men and women. Increasing research on sexual behavior and desires in later life is challenging the "asexual" image of older adults. People aged 75–102 do experience sensuality and sexual pleasure. Sexual attitudes and identity are established in early adulthood and change little. Sexuality remains important throughout life, and the sexual expression of "typical, healthy older persons is a relatively neglected topic of research". Other known sexual behaviors in older age groups include sexual thoughts, fantasies, and dreams; masturbation; oral sex; and vaginal and anal intercourse.
- Skin loses elasticity and gets drier and more lined and wrinkled.
- Wounds take longer to heal and are likelier to leave permanent scars.
- Trouble sleeping and daytime sleepiness affect more than half of seniors. In a study of 9,000 people with a mean age of 74, only 12% reported no sleep complaints. By age 65, deep sleep drops to about 5% of sleep time.
- Taste buds diminish by up to half by the age of 80. Food becomes less appealing and nutrition can suffer.
- Over the age of 85, thirst perception decreases, so that 41% of the elderly don't drink enough.
- Urinary incontinence is often found in old age.
- Vocal cords weaken and vibrate more slowly. This results in a weakened, breathy voice, "old person's voice".

Mental marks of old age include the following:

- Agreeability: Despite the stressfulness of old age, the words "agreeable" and "accepting" are used commonly to describe people of old age. However, in some people, the dependence that comes with old age induces feelings of incompetence and worthlessness from having to rely on others for many different basic living functions.
- Caution follows closely with old age. This antipathy toward "risk-taking" often stems from the fact that old people have less to gain and more to lose than younger people.
- Depressed mood. According to Cox, Abramson, Devine, and Hollon (2012), old age is a risk factor for depression caused by prejudice. When younger people are prejudiced against the elderly and then become old themselves, their anti-elderly prejudice turns inward, causing depression. "People with more negative age stereotypes will likely have higher rates of depression as they get older." Old age depression results in the over-65 population having the highest suicide rate.
- Fear of crime in old age, especially among the frail, sometimes weighs more heavily than concerns about finances or health and restricts what they do. The fear persists in spite of the fact that old people are victims of crime less often than younger people.
- Increasing fear of health problems.
- Mental disorders affect about 15% of people aged 60+ according to estimates by the World Health Organization. Another survey taken in 15 countries reported that mental disorders of adults interfered with their daily activities more than physical problems.
- Reduced mental and cognitive ability: Memory loss is common in old age due to the brain's decreased ability to encode, store, and retrieve information. It takes more time to learn the same amount of new information. The prevalence of dementia increases in old age from about 10% at age 65 to about 50% over age 85. Alzheimer's disease accounts for 50 to 80 percent of dementia cases. Demented behavior can include wandering, physical aggression, verbal outbursts, depression, and psychosis.

- Stubbornness: A study of over 400 seniors found a "preference for the routine". Explanations include old age's toll on "fluid intelligence" and the "more deeply entrenched" ways of the old.

Depression

(Major depressive disorder) is a common and serious medical illness that negatively affects how you feel, the way you think and how you act. Fortunately, it is also treatable. Depression causes feelings of sadness and/or a loss of interest in activities you once enjoyed. It can lead to a variety of emotional and physical problems and can decrease your ability to function at work and at home.

Depression symptoms can vary from mild to severe and can include:

- Feeling sad or having a depressed mood
- Loss of interest or pleasure in activities once enjoyed
- Changes in appetite — weight loss or gain unrelated to dieting
- Trouble sleeping or sleeping too much
- Loss of energy or increased fatigue
- Increase in purposeless physical activity (e.g., inability to sit still, pacing, handwringing) or slowed movements or speech (these actions must be severe enough to be observable by others)
- Feeling worthless or guilty
- Difficulty thinking, concentrating or making decisions
- Thoughts of death or suicide

Symptoms must last at least two weeks and must represent a change in your previous level of functioning for a diagnosis of depression. Also, medical conditions (e.g., thyroid problems, a brain tumor or vitamin deficiency) can mimic symptoms of depression so it is important to rule out general medical causes.

Depression affects an estimated one in 15 adults (6.7%) in any given year. And one in six people (16.6%) will experience depression at some time in their life. Depression can occur at any time, but on average, first appears during the late teens to mid-20s. Women are more likely than men to experience depression. Some studies show that one-third of women will experience a major depressive episode in their lifetime. There is a high degree of heritability (approximately 40%) when first-degree relatives (parents/children/siblings) have depression.

Depression Is Different From Sadness or Grief/Bereavement

The death of a loved one, loss of a job or the ending of a relationship are difficult experiences for a person to endure. It is normal for feelings of sadness or grief to develop in response to such situations. Those experiencing loss often might describe themselves as being “depressed.”

But being sad is not the same as having depression. The grieving process is natural and unique to each individual and shares some of the same features of depression. Both grief and depression may involve intense sadness and withdrawal from usual activities. They are also different in important ways:

- In grief, painful feelings come in waves, often intermixed with positive memories of the deceased. In major depression, mood and/or interest (pleasure) are decreased for most of two weeks.
- In grief, self-esteem is usually maintained. In major depression, feelings of worthlessness and self-loathing are common.
- In grief, thoughts of death may surface when thinking of or fantasizing about “joining” the deceased loved one. In major depression, thoughts are focused on ending one’s life due to feeling worthless or undeserving of living or being unable to cope with the pain of depression.

Risk Factors for Depression

Depression can affect anyone—even a person who appears to live in relatively ideal circumstances.

Several factors can play a role in depression:

- Biochemistry: Differences in certain chemicals in the brain may contribute to symptoms of depression.
- Genetics: Depression can run in families. For example, if one identical twin has depression, the other has a 70 percent chance of having the illness sometime in life.

- Personality: People with low self-esteem, who are easily overwhelmed by stress, or who are generally pessimistic appear to be more likely to experience depression.
- Environmental factors: Continuous exposure to violence, neglect, abuse or poverty may make some people more vulnerable to depression.

How Is Depression Treated

Depression is among the most treatable of mental disorders. Between 80% and 90% percent of people with depression eventually respond well to treatment. Almost all patients gain some relief from their symptoms.

Before a diagnosis or treatment, a health professional should conduct a thorough diagnostic evaluation, including an interview and a physical examination. In some cases, a blood test might be done to make sure the depression is not due to a medical condition like a thyroid problem or a vitamin deficiency (reversing the medical cause would alleviate the depression-like symptoms). The evaluation will identify specific symptoms and explore medical and family histories as well as cultural and environmental factors with the goal of arriving at a diagnosis and planning a course of action.

Medication

Brain chemistry may contribute to an individual's depression and may factor into their treatment. For this reason, antidepressants might be prescribed to help modify one's brain chemistry. These medications are not sedatives, "uppers" or tranquilizers. They are not habit-forming. Generally antidepressant medications have no stimulating effect on people not experiencing depression.

Antidepressants may produce some improvement within the first week or two of use yet full benefits may not be seen for two to three months. If a patient feels little or no improvement after several weeks, his or her psychiatrist can alter the dose of the medication or add or substitute another antidepressant. In some situations other psychotropic medications may be helpful. It is important to let your doctor know if a medication does not work or if you experience side effects.

Psychiatrists usually recommend that patients continue to take medication for six or more months after the symptoms have improved. Longer-term maintenance treatment may be suggested to decrease the risk of future episodes for certain people at high risk.

QOL

Quality of life (QOL) is defined by the World Health Organization as "an individual's perception of their position in life in the context of the culture and value systems in which they live and in relation to their goals, expectations, standards and concerns". Standard indicators of the quality of life include wealth, employment, the environment, physical and mental health, education, recreation and leisure time, social belonging, religious beliefs, safety, security and freedom. QOL has a wide range of contexts, including the fields of international development, healthcare, politics and employment. Health related QOL (HRQOL) is an evaluation of QOL and its relationship with health.

One approach, called engaged theory, outlined in the journal of Applied Research in the Quality of Life, posits four domains in assessing quality of life: ecology, economics, politics and culture. In the domain of culture, for example, it includes the following subdomains of quality of life:

- Beliefs and ideas
- Creativity and recreation
- Enquiry and learning
- Gender and generations
- Identity and engagement
- Memory and projection
- Well-being and health

Under this conception, other frequently related concepts include freedom, human rights, and happiness. However, since happiness is subjective and difficult to measure, other measures are generally given priority. It has also been shown that happiness, as much as it can be measured, does not necessarily increase correspondingly with the comfort that results from increasing income. As a result, standard of living should not be taken to be a measure of happiness. Also sometimes considered related is the concept of human security, though the latter may be considered at a more basic level and for all people.

Within the field of healthcare, quality of life is often regarded in terms of how a certain ailment affects a patient on an individual level. This may be a debilitating weakness that is not life-threatening; life-threatening illness that is not terminal; terminal illness; the predictable, natural decline in the health of an elder; an unforeseen mental/physical decline of a loved one; or chronic, end-stage disease processes. Researchers at the University of Toronto's Quality of Life Research Unit define quality of life as "The degree to which a person enjoys the important possibilities of his or her life" (UofT). Their Quality of Life Model is based on the categories "being", "belonging", and "becoming"; respectively who one is, how one is connected to one's environment, and whether one achieves one's personal goals, hopes, and aspirations.

Experience sampling studies show substantial between-person variability in within-person associations between somatic symptoms and quality of life. Hecht and Shiel measure quality of life as "the patient's ability to enjoy normal life activities" since life quality is strongly related to wellbeing without suffering from sickness and treatment. There are multiple assessments available that measure Health-Related Quality of Life.

Empowerment of the elderly with respect to improve the degree of independence they feel comfortable will help in increase of psychological domain of QOL. Controlling and modifying environmental factors to improve the feeling of self-efficacy will help in improvement of environmental domain. Social and physical recreational activities will help in building self-image, satisfaction level and QOL. Health education with regard to activity and environmental changes and increase in social relationship may help in improving the QOL among the elderly population. A preserved self and meaning in existence. The areas contributing to the experience of QoL were: life values, recollection of previous life, activities, health, significant others, material wealth, and home.

Aging is an extraordinary process where you become the person you always should have been. I like the way I look, I like the way I feel, I like my energy. I have wisdom, I have perspective and I can tell you that aging can be so incredible.

CHAPTER- 2

REVIEW OF

LITERATURE

Sridip Mandal, Saikat Bhattacharya, Atanu Roy, Soumitra Mondal, on (05-05-2022). The research focus on the majority of people's daily lives have been significantly impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic. Preventative measures and widespread lockdown have separated people, hurt the global economy, and restricted access to physical and mental treatment. The COVID-19 pandemic is posing significant issues to the quality of life (QoL) of the geriatric population, particularly those who were affected by this illness. Their daily lives are impacted by the typical lifestyle choices they make, such as obtaining enough exercise, eating enough fruits and vegetables, and engaging in personal preventive behaviors like frequent hand washing, face mask use, and social withdrawal. This study looked into the quality of life (QoL) of elderly people in West Bengal who have COVID-19 disease. Six months after COVID-19 positive patients were discharged, a monocentric cross-sectional observational research was carried out. (Mandal et al., 1994)

Fiske, A., Wetherell, J. L., & Gatz, M. (2009). The study is all about depression although less common in older persons than in younger adults, depression can have devastating repercussions. The first onset occurs in more than half of patients in later age. Despite a decline, older suicide rates remain higher than those of younger persons and are more directly linked to depression. Compared to sad younger adults, depressed older adults are more likely to exhibit cognitive abnormalities, physical symptoms, and lack of interest. They are also less likely to express affective symptoms. It is likely that a complex mix of genetic predispositions, cognitive diathesis, age-related neurobiological changes, and stressful experiences will result in the development of late-life depression. A frequently ignored risk factor for late-life depression is insomnia. We propose that one typical route to depression in older persons is,

Sahoo SS, Kaur V, Panda UK, Nath B, Parija PP, Sahu DP(2022). Depression in older people is the focus of the study. Along with other comorbidities, depression has an effect on the quality of life and functional capacity of the elderly population. This study aimed to assess the quality of life and rates of depression in elderly inhabitants of old age homes compared to the general population. In Raipur, Chhattisgarh, metropolitan areas between March and July 2016, a cross-sectional survey was done among elderly residents of the community and old-age homes. The study involved 100 senior citizens, 50 from each group. In order to measure geriatric depression and quality of life, the Geriatric Depression Scale 15 (GDS-15) and Older People Quality of Life (OPQoL)-35 scales were employed, respectively. The Chi-square/exact Fisher's test was used to examine the relationship between demographic factors and depression. Between the GDS-15 and the OPQoL-35 scale, Pearson's correlation coefficient was obtained. The prevalence of geriatric depression was 59%. The elderly living in old age homes scored lower on the quality of life scale overall (11.78 vs. 13.56), health (12.8 vs. 14.0, social relationships (10.48 vs. 13.9), control over life (11.92 vs. 14.08), home and neighbourhood (9.38 vs. 12.36), psychological and emotional wellbeing (10.96 vs. 13.7), financial situation (14.5 vs. 16.7), and leisure and activities (11.48 vs. 13.9). (13.86 vs. 15.28). It has been established that there is a mediocrely positive correlation between depression and quality of life. The rising frequency in our study emphasises the need to determine the true burden on the elderly population and to offer the necessary supportive services. It does this by utilising a coordinated primary care approach, as well as social and community assistance. (Sahoo et al., 2022) kenisonShrestha, Saroj Prasad ojha, Saraswati Dhungana, Sneha Shrestha,(2020). The number of aged individuals is an increasing research topic, and depression among the elderly is a major problem. Institutionalization can lower their quality of life and increase their risk of getting depressed. This study's objectives were to examine demographic correlates, assess quality of life, and ascertain the prevalence of depression among elderly persons residing in institutions. A cross-sectional study with an institutionalised basis was conducted between September 2017 and September 2018. 159 senior citizens who resided in nursing homes were included in the poll. The World Health Organization's Quality of Life-Brief was used to gauge quality of life, while the Geriatric Depression Scale-15 item's validated Nepali translation was utilised to gauge depression. To code and analyse, SPSS was utilised. The frequency of depression was 39.6% among the 159 elderly subjects with a mean age of 76 years who were interviewed. The prevalence of depression was found to be higher in males (42% of of obtained information. The mean age of the 159 senior participants who were interviewed revealed that depression was present 39.6% of the time. Males were found to have greater incidence of depression (42% of institutionalised elderly). Although there was a negative correlation between depression status and quality of life, age, gender, and depression state were substantially linked with one another ($p < 0.05$). According to the study's findings, senior residents of institutions who suffer from depression are a serious problem whose effects can be seen on their quality of life.

Neeti Mishra, Anil Kumar Mishra, Mansi Bidija,(2017). Fear of falling in the elderly is a significant contributor to loss of independence, which has an impact on physical function. Another significant public health issue for older persons is depression, which can have disastrous effects such as an increase in mortality in later life. Older folks' QOL has improved. A significant problem as a result of demographic shifts brought on by population ageing. The study's objective was to evaluate depression and fall fear in senior people in India in order to learn more about the association between QOL, depression, and fall fear. To investigate the connection between GDS, FES, and WHOQOL-BREF, the data was analysed using Pearson's coefficient of correlation. GDS and WHOQOL had a correlation coefficient of 0.4372 ($p < 0.05$) while FES and GDS had a correlation coefficient of 0.5257 ($p < 0.05$). This study found a substantial relationship between depression, fall efficacy, and QOL in senior individuals. This link has significant implications for the design of rehabilitation programmes that seek to enhance motivation and balance since they will have less of an influence on elderly people's quality of life. (Mishra et al., 2017)

Cao, W.; Guo, C.; Ping, W.; Tan, Z.; Guo, Y.; Zheng, 9 July 2016, The goal of the study was to assess the quality of life (QOL) and depression and provide further insights into the relationship between QOL and depression among community-dwelling elderly Chinese people. Baseline data were collected from 1168 older adults (aged ≥ 60) in a large, prospective cohort study on measurement and evaluation of health-promoting and health-protecting behaviors intervention on chronic disease in different community-dwelling age groups. QOL was assessed using the 26-item, World Health Organization Quality of Life, brief version (WHOQOL-BREF) and depression was assessed using the 30-item Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS). The mean WHOQOL-BREF score for all dimensions was approximately 60, with the highest mean value (61.92) observed for social relationships, followed by environment, physical health, and psychological health domains. In this cohort, 26.1% of elderly urban adults met GDS criteria for depression. There were negative correlations between physical health (Odds Ratio (OR) = 0.928, 95% Confidence Interval (CI): 0.910–0.946), psychological health (OR = 0.906, 95% CI: 0.879–0.934), environment (OR = 0.966, 95% CI: 0.944–0.989) and depression among elderly people. Those with depression were older, less educated, had a lower monthly income, and were more likely to report insomnia. All WHOQOL-BREF domains, with the exception of the social domain were negatively correlated with depression.

S. Dantas, B. A. da, & V. Torres, G. de. (2020, April 4). The study is to evaluate the impact of multidimensional interventions on quality of life (QoL) and depressive symptoms in Brazilian older adults living in the community. Longitudinal, quasi-experimental study of older adults receiving conventional primary health care (PHC). The interventions were designed in response to a first round of data collection and validated through pilot testing in groups of older adults from another community. The validated interventions were then applied to an intervention group (IG). To measure their effect, we used the Medical Outcomes Short-Form Health Survey (SF-36) quality of life scale and the Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS-30). This multidimensional intervention was associated with significant improvement in mental health, general health perceptions, and physical functioning in a sample of Brazilian older adults.

Judith Renaud & Emmanuelle Bédard (2013) Visual impairment is more prevalent in the elderly and depression is common in this population. Although many studies have investigated depression or quality of life (QOL) in older adults with visual impairment, few have looked at the association between these two concepts for this population. The aim of this systematized review was to describe the association between depression and QOL in older adults with visual impairment. A search was done using multiple electronic databases for studies addressing the relationship between QOL and depression in elders with visual impairment. The concept of QOL was divided into two different approaches, ie, QOL as achievement and QOL as subjective well-being. Comparison of QOL scores between participants with and without depression (Cohen's d) and correlations between depression and QOL (Pearson's r) were examined. Additional studies are necessary to pinpoint further the determinants and mediators of this relationship. Considering the high prevalence rate of depression in this community and its disabling effects on QOL, interventions to prevent and treat depression are essential. More efforts are needed in clinical settings to train health care practitioners to identify depressed elders with visual impairment and provide appropriate treatment.

Nyandra, Made and Kartiko, Bambang Hadi and Susanto, Putu Chris and Supriyati, Adri and Suryasa, Wayan and Susanto, Putu Chris, (March 24, 2018). To understand the effect of education and training on quality of life and score of depression in the elderly population. The elderly population in Bali have increased in recent years, influenced by the improvement of health and nutrition. On one hand, still very few programs exist to help the elderly live independently. On the other hand, there is a decreasing trend in the quality of life and an increasing trend in depression score. Elderly individuals were divided into three groups with 22 members, 32 members, and 38 members respectively. One group was in the University is an urban group, one group was in Kuta Utara (suburban) and one rural group was in Munggu village. All groups received education from Dhyana Pura University lecturers with different topics twice a week for 5 months, with physical exercise each Saturday. Before and after the process, depression scores (Back Depression Index) and quality of life using the World Health Organization Quality of Life (WHOQOL) were measured.

Kenison Shrestha, Saroj Prasad Ojha, Saraswati Dhungana, Sneha Shrestha, , 2020, Elderly population is on the rise and elderly depression is very common. Institutionalization further increases the risk of them being more depressed and can have impact on quality of life. The aim of this study was to find the prevalence of depression in institutionalized elders and assess for the demographic correlates and also assess the quality of life. An institutionalized based cross- sectional study was conducted from September 2017–18. A total of 159 elders residing in old age home were included in the study. The validated Nepali translation of Geriatric Depression Scale -15 item was used to assess the depression and quality of life was measured using world health organization quality of life- brief. The collected data were coded and analyzed using SPSS version 16. The descriptive statistics was calculated for socio-demographic and association with depression was analyzed using chi square test. The correlation between depression status and quality of life was done using non- parametric Spearman's rank correlation coefficient test. The finding of this study concluded that depression among institutionalized elders was a substantial problem and affected their quality of life.

Dr. Theingi Maung Maung, October – 2022, Useful in-sights should be provided to the government, private sectors and charitable individuals regarding the psychological and emotional needs of elderly people who are either from the underprivileged category or being unfortunate enough to be living apart from their families. Providing better care for the elderly has become public health challenges especially for those who stayed in institutionalised dwellings. There is limited scientific evidence reporting the experiences of elderly to date and QOL of elderly residing in old age home was not explored enough in Malaysia. Malaysia government is developing programs that are focusing on the special needs of citizens aged 60 years and above. Moreover, one of the main agendas in the 11th Malaysia Plan 2016-2020 was improving the quality of life (QOL) of the citizen. Very limited research has been done concerning depression in Malaysia older adults residing in old age homes and further exploration is urgently needed. To seal the considerable research gap and in line with the government policy, the study population in this study will be focusing on older adults residing at old folk home and depression and quality of life among the respondents will be assessed. Since the study was carried out during COVID-19 pandemic period, findings can be related pandemic situation of Malaysia. This study is also in line with the National Priority Area (NPA) to improve medical and healthcare practices/policy and United Nation's Sustainable Development Goal (SGD) number 3, Good and health and wellbeing (Home | Sustainable Development, n.d.). Findings from this study may help to develop the necessary guidelines for the old age homes. Outcomes from this study can increase the public awareness of depression and QOL and findings can highlight the importance of exercise among the older adults residing at old age homes.

R, S. A. T. E. N. D. E. R. (2017, April 20). The current investigation was intended to examine the adjustment, loneliness, helplessness, death anxiety and depression among elderly people. In order to fulfil the said need a sample of 400 both male and female elderly people in the age range of 65- 84 years living with/ without family was selected (Table 4.1) which is already proposed in the previous chapter of methodology. The selected sample was administered “ShamshadJasbir Old Age Adjustment Inventory, The Revised UCLA Loneliness Scale, Learned Helplessness Scale (LHS), Death Anxiety Scale- Extended and Geriatric Depression Scale- Hindi Version”. The acquired responses of the respondents were calculated according to the prescribed manuals of the scales and evaluated accordingly. Once the scores were obtained on these tests the raw data was converted into tabular form and was analyzed statistically with the support of SPSS 16 version de Oliveira, L. D. S. S. C. B., Souza, E. C., Rodrigues, R. A. S., Fett, C. A., & Piva, A. B. (2019). Health problems may negatively affect the psychological and physical aspects of life, influencing the quality of life of older adults. The objective of this study was to analyze the effects of physical activity on quality of life, anxiety, and depression in the elderly population. We performed a cross-sectional study of 200 elderly people of both genders. Subjects were divided into two groups: one with 100 senior citizens engaged in physical activities in a social center for the elderly; and another composed of 100 subjects who lived in the community but were not engaged in physical activities. The instruments used to assess physical activities, quality of life, and anxiety and depression were, respectively: the modified Baecke questionnaire; the 36-Item Short Form Health Survey (SF-36); and the Hospital Anxiety and Depression Scale (HADS). The data were analyzed using the Student's t test, Pearson's r, and analysis of variance (ANOVA), with odds ratio and a 5% significance level ($p < 0.05$). We observed that the active group showed higher scores of physical activity and quality of life. Conversely, the sedentary group revealed higher scores of anxiety and depression. Data assessment revealed a strong correlation between the domains quality of life, level of vitality, and mental health ($r = 0.77$). The prevalence ratio showed that physical activity is a protective factor against anxiety and depression in the elderly. The findings suggest a correlation between low levels of physical activity and symptoms of anxiety and depression in the elderly living in the community.

Al-Ghafri, B. R., Al-Mahrezi, A., & Chan, M. F. (2021). This study tells depression is considered as one of the most common obstacles to daily life activities and quality of life in the elderly. Evidence is accumulating regarding the effectiveness of reminiscence and life review interventions in reducing depression and raising well-being in the elderly. The aim of this review was to determine the effects of life review interventions on depression outcomes among the elderly. A search of the literature was performed through 11 electronic databases to identify all randomized controlled trials studies that examine life review effects on depression among the elderly. For each study, the effect size (Cohen's d) between groups (life review vs. control) differences in depression scores for post-intervention and follow-up intervention were computed. Through this systematic review and meta-analysis, the overall results showed a moderate effect to reducing depression levels among the elderly in the life review group after carrying out post-intervention measurements, while in the follow-up the effect was small. This review indicates that life review intervention is one of the options likely to be of benefit for elderly in primary care settings, but further research can be focused on intervention and follow-up durations to obtain long-term effects.

Im, M. L., & Lee, J. I. (2014). The purpose of this study was to examine effects of art and music therapy on depression and cognitive function of the elderly. This was one group pre-test, post-test design. Data were collected from January to March, 2013, from 94 elderly. The results were collected as follows: 1. Art therapy was revealed a statistical significant difference between before and after treatment on the depression of participants. 2. Music therapy was revealed a statistical significant at previous and after treatment on the depression of participants. 3. Treatment according to the severity of depression than the music therapy and art therapy were examined statistically significantly lower. This study will be provided basic information in order to develop program for success healthy life of elderly.

He, L., Wang, J., Wang, F., Zhang, L., Liu, Y., & Xu, F. (2022). To estimate the prevalence of depression symptoms and quality of life (QoL) and examined the influence of factors in the empty nest elderly. This was a cross-sectional study, which was conducted from February 2022 to May 2022. We recruited a convenience sample of no empty-nest elderly and empty-nest elderly (≥ 60 years) living in Chengdu. QoL was assessed using WHOQOL-BREF, Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS-15) was used to assess depression symptoms. Multivariable logistic regression was used to analyze data between independent variables with depression symptoms. Depression symptoms are common mental health problems among empty-nest elderly. We found that age, chronic disease ≥ 2 and physical activity were important factors that have an impact on depressive symptoms. Empty-nest elderly would have lowered QoL score. Two thousand twenty-six participants were included in this study, 39.0% (660/1,082) experienced depression symptoms among empty-nest elderly. Age (aOR, 1.02; 95% CI, 1.00- 1.04; $P = 0.046$), chronic disease ≥ 2 (aOR, 3.29; 95% CI, 2.50-4.33; $P < 0.001$) were associated with increased risk of depression symptoms, and physical activity (aOR, 0.59; 95% CI, 0.40- 0.87; $P = 0.008$), physical health (aOR, 0.93; 95% CI, 0.88-0.99; $P = 0.026$), psychological health (aOR, 0.93; 95% CI, 0.87-0.98; $P = 0.013$), and total score (aOR, 0.97; 95% CI, 0.96-0.99; $P < 0.001$) were associated with decreased risk of depression symptoms among empty-nest elderly.

Levkovich, I., Shinan-Altman, S., Essar Schwartz, N., & Alperin, M. (2021). This study aims to assess how optimism, social support, and perceived susceptibility are associated with depressive symptoms and health-related quality of life among elderly patients during the COVID-19 pandemic in Israel. In a cross-sectional study, 256 participants age 60 through 95 completed the following self-administered questionnaires: Perceived Susceptibility, Life Orientation Test (LOT-R), Multidimensional Scale of Perceived Social Support (MSPSS), Symptoms of Depression (CES-D) and health-related quality of life (SF-12v2 Health Survey). Data were collected from June to July 2020, 3 months after the COVID-19 state of emergency was declared in Israel. Participants were interviewed by family medicine residents via telephone. Statistical analyses included Pearson correlations, t -tests between groups, regression analyses, and Hayes' PROCESS to analyze a moderated mediation model. Of the elderly participants, 37.5% were classified as having depression. Optimism, social support and health-related quality of life were positively associated. Higher optimism and social support were related to lower perceived susceptibility and lower depression. Results of a multivariate regression explained 29% of the variance in depression and 19% of the variance in health-related quality of life. The relationships assessed by 4 Process models were significant, such that higher optimism and social support were related to lower perceived susceptibility, which in turn was related to higher depression and lower health-related quality of life. Optimism and social support may be effective in coping with challenges and buffering depression. Perceived susceptibility may mediate the association of optimism and social support with higher depression and lower health-related quality of life. The conclusions of this study underscore the need to treat depression among older adults during this period. Hence, healthcare providers should also support elderly patients living at home. In giving this type of help, healthcare providers should strive to increase social support and optimism among older adults.

Hu, W., Chu, J., Chen, X., Liu, S., Sun, N., Han, Q., Li, T., Feng, Z., He, Q., & Shen, Y. (2022). This study aimed to determine the association between sleep quality and duration and HRQoL among the elderly in the United Kingdom, assess whether depression mediated the association, and explore the role of physical activity (PA) in the path association. Although studies have shown that sleep quality (duration) is associated with health-related quality of life (HRQoL), most of these studies have been small-sized and targeted at young and middle-aged adults. In addition, few studies have explored the path mechanism of sleep disorders leading to impaired HRQoL. Data were extracted from the baseline survey of the UK Biobank, a large prospective cohort study enrolling more than 500,000 participants, of which 52,551 older adults (aged ≥ 60 years) were included in the study. HRQoL was assessed using the European Quality of Life-5 Dimensions. Tobit and multivariate logistic regression models were used to determine the association between sleep quality and duration and HRQoL. The mediating and moderated mediation models were estimated using the PROCESS macro and MEDCURVE macro. The findings show that poor sleep quality and duration were independently associated with worse HRQoL among the elderly in the United Kingdom. Furthermore, PA buffers the mediating effect of depression and adverse effects of sleep disorders on HRQoL. It is essential to properly increase PA and provide early intervention for depression in the elderly with sleep disorders to improve their HRQoL.

Hu, W., Chu, J., Chen, X., Liu, S., Sun, N., Han, Q., Li, T., Feng, Z., He, Q., & Shen, Y. (2022). This study aimed to determine the association between sleep quality and duration and HRQoL among the elderly in the United Kingdom, assess whether depression mediated the association, and explore the role of physical activity (PA) in the path association. Although studies have shown that sleep quality (duration) is associated with health-related quality of life (HRQoL), most of these studies have been small-sized and targeted at young and middle-aged adults. In addition, few studies have explored the path mechanism of sleep disorders leading to impaired HRQoL. Data were extracted from the baseline survey of the UK Biobank, a large prospective cohort study enrolling more than 500,000 participants, of which 52,551 older adults (aged ≥ 60 years) were included in the study. HRQoL was assessed using the European Quality of Life-5 Dimensions. Tobit and multivariate logistic regression models were used to determine the association between sleep quality and duration and HRQoL. The mediating and moderated mediation models were estimated using the PROCESS macro and MEDCURVE macro. The Tobit model showed that the elderly with short or long sleep duration ($\beta = -0.062$, 95% confidence interval [CI] = -0.071 to -0.053 ; $\beta = -0.072$, 95% CI = -0.086 to -0.058) had worse HRQoL after adjusting potential covariates. In the logistic regression models, we found an inverted U-shaped association between sleep duration and HRQoL. Moreover, a significant positive association was observed between sleep quality and HRQoL (all $P < 0.05$). The results also revealed that depression mediated the association between sleep disorders and HRQoL (sleep quality: $\beta = 0.008$, 95% CI = 0.007 - 0.010 ; sleep duration: $\theta = 0.001$ [mean], 95% CI = 0.001 - 0.002). Furthermore, PA moderated all paths among sleep quality and duration, depression, and HRQoL, and greater effects were observed in the elderly with lower PA levels. The findings show that poor sleep quality and duration were independently associated with worse HRQoL among the elderly in the United Kingdom. Furthermore, PA buffers the mediating effect of depression and adverse effects of sleep disorders on HRQoL. It is essential to properly increase PA and provide early intervention for depression in the elderly with sleep disorders to improve their HRQoL.

Cao, W., Guo, C., Ping, W., Tan, Z., Guo, Y., & Zheng, J. (2016). The goal of the study was to assess the quality of life (QOL) and depression and provide further insights into the relationship between QOL and depression among community-dwelling elderly Chinese people. Baseline data were collected from 1168 older adults (aged ≥ 60) in a large, prospective cohort study on measurement and evaluation of health-promoting and health-protecting behaviors intervention on chronic disease in different community-dwelling age groups. QOL was assessed using the 26-item, World Health Organization Quality of Life, brief version (WHOQOL-BREF) and depression was assessed using the 30-item Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS). The mean WHOQOL-BREF score for all dimensions was approximately 60, with the highest mean value (61.92) observed for social relationships, followed by environment, physical health, and psychological health domains. In this cohort, 26.1% of elderly urban adults met GDS criteria for depression. There were negative correlations between physical health (Odds Ratio (OR) = 0.928, 95% Confidence Interval (CI): 0.910-0.946), psychological health (OR = 0.906, 95% CI: 0.879-0.934), environment (OR = 0.966, 95% CI: 0.944-0.989) and depression among elderly people. Those with depression were older, less educated, had a lower monthly income, and were more likely to report insomnia. All WHOQOL-BREF domains, with the exception of the social domain were negatively correlated with depression.

Tsaras, K., Tsiantoula, M., Papagiannis, D., Papathanasiou, I. V., Chatzi, M., Kelesi, M., Kaba, E., & Fradelos, E. C. (2022). The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of depressive symptoms, insomnia symptoms, and comorbid depressive and insomnia symptoms on the quality of life among community-dwelling older adults in an urban area of central Greece. A cross-sectional study was conducted on 200 older adults (aged ≥ 60) collected from five Open Care Centers for Elderly People of the Municipality of Larissa, Greece. Data were obtained through a questionnaire that included demographic, socioeconomic, and health-related characteristics; the World Health Organization Quality of Life (WHOQoL)-Bref questionnaire; the Geriatric Depression Scale; and the Athens Insomnia Scale. The prevalences of depression, insomnia, and comorbid depression and insomnia were 28% (95% confidence interval (95% CI): 21.8-34.2%), 40.5% (95% CI: 33.7-47.3%), and 19% (95% CI: 13.5-24.5%), respectively. The mean WHOQoL-Bref score for all domains was approximately 14.50, with the highest mean value observed for psychological health (14.79 ± 2.60), followed by the physical health (14.49 ± 2.66), social relationships (14.39 ± 2.03), and environmental domains (14.32 ± 1.90). All WHOQoL-Bref domains were negatively correlated with depression and insomnia. Older adults with depressive symptoms, insomnia symptoms, and comorbid depressive and insomnia symptoms had lower scores in all quality of life dimensions compared with those without.

CHAPTER- 3

RESEARCH

METHODOLOGY

Aim of the study

To study the quality of life and depression among elderly.

Objectives

1. To study the socio demographic profile of the respondents.
2. To examine the quality of life among respondents.
3. To understand the level of depression among respondents.
4. To analyse the relationship between quality of life and the level of depression among respondents.

Descriptive research design has been used in the study. Because the study is descriptive in nature as it includes fact finding. The researcher has no control over variables and the researcher can only present what has happened or what is happening. Descriptive research studies are those studies which are concerned with describing the characteristics of a particular individual of a group. The universe of the study is geriatric population. Convenience sampling method has been used in the study. The sample size for the study is 30 respondents. Primary data was the first-hand information collected from the elderly population. Secondary data was taken from books, journals and online websites. Data was collected using the standardized scale. Elderly's quality of life was measured using Older People's Quality of Life (OPQOL) developed by Ann Bowling. This scale consists of 35 items which includes 8 dimensions such as Life overall, Health, Social relationship/leisure and social activities, Independence, control over life/freedom, Home and neighbourhood, Psychological and emotional well-being, financial circumstances, Religion/culture. The items were measured using a 5-point Likert scale from strongly agree to strongly disagree and Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS) developed by J.A. Yesavage consists of 15 items. The data was analyzed using the SPSS 23 version

RESEARCH DESIGN

Research design is the plan, structure, and strategy of investigation conceived as to obtain answers to research questions and also it is an outline of the research scheme on which the researcher is to work. Research design is defined to be the blueprint of the research, as it lays down the method and procedure for the collection of requisite information and its measurement and analysis with a view to arriving at certain meaningful conclusions at the end of the proposed study. Research design used in this project is -Descriptive Research Design. Descriptive studies are undertaken when the researcher is interested in knowing the characteristics of certain groups such as age, sex, education level, occupation or income. It can also be conducted when one wants to know the proportion of people in a given population who behave in a particular manner, making projections of certain things, or determining the relationship between two or more variables. This study adopts a descriptive research design method.

SAMPLING TECHNIQUE

In statistics, Convenience sampling is a non-probability sampling method where units are selected for inclusion in the sample because they are the easiest for the researcher to access.

This can be due to geographical proximity, availability at a given time, or willingness to participate in the research. Sometimes called accidental sampling, convenience sampling is a type of non-random sampling. 60 and above years old. The Sample Size of the Research is 30 respondents.

SOURCES OF DATA COLLECTION

Data collection is a systematic approach to gathering information from a variety of sources to get a complete and accurate picture of the specific area of interest.

Primary Data

The data collected for the first time through field surveys is known as primary data. Primary data refers to the first-hand information collected for the study by the researcher with own personal effort from the Respondents and Questionnaires.

Secondary Data

Secondary data refers to the information or facts already collected related to the area of study for research. Secondary data has been collected through the various records of the scholarly papers, journals, documents, articles etc.

TOOLS FOR DATA COLLECTION

- The Researcher used an Online Questionnaire method (Google form) for Data collection.
- The Researcher used Elderly's quality of life was measured using Older People's Quality of Life (OPQOL) developed by Ann Bowling. This scale consists of 35 items which includes 8 dimensions such as Life overall, Health, Social relationship/leisure and social activities, Independence, control over life/freedom, Home and neighbourhood, Psychological and emotional well-being, financial circumstances, Religion/culture. The items were measured using a 5-point Likert scale from strongly agree to strongly disagree.

- Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS) developed by J.A. Yesavage consists of 15 items.

DATA ANALYSIS

In this study, cross tabulation is used to quantitatively analyse the relationship between multiple variables. Cross tabulation is also referred to as contingency tables or crosstabs, are where group variables together and enable researchers to understand the correlation between the different variables. The Researcher used IBM SPSS (Statistical Package for the Social Science) TRIAL VERSION for entering data, coding the data.

HYPOTHESIS

H1- There is no significant difference among the respondents with Age Level (60-70, 71-80, 81 & above) with regards to Geriatric Depression.

H2- There is no significant difference between Geriatric Depression and Gender

H3- There is no significant difference between Social Relationship and Nature of Family

H4- There is no significant difference between Home & Neighbourhood and Nature of Family.

SCOPE OF STUDY

This research could identify ways to reduce stigma and discrimination towards elderly peoples. Research in this area could investigate how financial, cultural and societal factors leads to depression and how it affects the quality of life of elderly populations. The study in this area could examine how to increase the quality of life of elderly populations.

Research in this area could focus on understanding day today life of an elderly, and to know the quality of life and condition of elderly and what makes them to go in depression.

LIMITATIONS OF STUDY

Participants may be hesitate to report because of their family where as many elderly peoples are dependent, they expect one to one conversations, loneliness had made one solitary. There may be numerous extraneous variables that can influence attitudes towards such as age, gender, religion, and personal experiences. It can be difficult to control for these variables in research studies, which can limit the generalizability of the findings.

CHAPTER- 4

DATA ANALYSIS &

INTERPRETATION

Demographic details

Table 4.1. Indicate the age of the respondents.

Age	Frequency	Percent
60-70 years	25	83.3
71-80 years	2	6.7
81 and above years	3	10.0
Total	30	100.0

The majority 83.3% (25) of the respondents are 60 to 70 years of age. The minority 10.0% (3) of the respondents are 81 and above years of age.

Table 4.2. Indicates the Gender of the respondents.

Gender	Frequency	Percent
Male	13	43.3
Female	17	56.7
Total	30	100.0

56.7% (17) of the respondents are Female. 43.3% (13) of the respondents are Male. Total number of respondents 100.0% (30)

Table 4.3. Indicates the Marital Status of the respondents.

Marital Status	Frequency	Percent
Married	20	66.7
Widow	10	33.3
Total	30	100.0

66.7% (20) of the respondents are married. 33.3% (10) of the respondents are widow.

Table 4.4. Indicates the Nature of the family.

Nature of the family	Frequency	Percent
Nuclear	17	56.7
Joint	13	43.3
Total	30	100.0

56.7% (17) of the respondents are in nuclear family. 43.4% (13) of the respondents are in Joint family

Table 4.5. Indicates the Domicile of the respondents.

Domicile	Frequency	Percent
Urban	12	40.0
Rural	18	60.0
Total	30	100.0

40.0% (12) of the respondents are in Urban areas. 60.0% (18) of the respondents are in Rural areas.

Table 4.6. Indicates the Geriatric Depression Scale of the respondents.

GDS level
Valid	Frequency	Percent
Low	16	53.3
Medium	9	30.0
High	5	16.7
Total	30	100.0

The above table shows that 53.3% of the respondents have low Geriatric depression level. 30.0% of the respondents have medium and 16.7% of the people have high Geriatric depression level.

Table 4.7. Indicates the Quality of life of the respondents.

QOL level
Valid	Frequency	Percent
Good	13	43.3
Moderate	16	53.3
Poor	1	3.3
Total	30	100.0

The above table shows that 53.3% of the respondents have moderate quality of life. 43.3% of the respondents have good quality of life and 3.3% have poor quality of life

Table 4.8. Indicates the Crosstabulation of GDS level and Life over all levels.GDS level * Life over all levels Crosstabulation

Geriatric Depression Scale		Life Overall			Total
		Good	Moderate	Poor
Low	Frequency	11	5	0	16
	Percentage	36.7%	16.7%	0.0%	53.3%
Medium	Frequency	4	5	0	9
	Percentage	13.3%	16.7%	0.0%	30.0%
High	Frequency	0	3	2	5
	Percentage	0.0%	10.0%	6.7%	16.7%

Majority of respondents 36.7 % with low Geriatric Depression have good quality of life in life overall dimension. There is an equal distribution of respondents 16.7% among low and medium level of Geriatric Depression have moderate level in life overall.

Table 4.9. Indicates the Crosstabulation of GDS level and Health.

Geriatric Depression Scale		Health level			Total
		Good	Moderate	Poor
Low	Frequency	7	7	2	16
	Percentage	23.30%	23.30%	6.70%	53.30%
Medium	Frequency	0	6	3	9
	Percentage	0.00%	20.00%	10.00%	30.00%
High	Frequency	0	4	1	5
	Percentage	0.00%	13.30%	3.30%	16.70%

The above data interprets that in 23.3% of respondents with low GDS level have good level 'and moderate level in health dimensions of quality of life. 20% of the respondents with medium GDS level have moderate in health dimensions in quality of life.

Table 4.10. Indicates the Crosstabulation of GDS level and Social relationships/Leisure and social activities.

GDS level * Social Level Crosstabulation
Geriatric Depression Scale		Social Level			Total
		Good	Moderate	Poor
Low	Frequency	0	16	0	16
	Percentage	0.0%	53.3%	0.0%	53.3%

High	Frequency	0	4	1	5
	Percentage	0.0%	13.3%	3.3%	16.7%

The above data interprets that in 53.3% of respondents with low GDS level have moderate level in Social relationships/leisure and social activities. 23.3% of respondents with medium GDS level have moderate level in Social relationships/leisure and social activities. 13.3% of the respondents with High GDS level have moderate level in Social relationships/leisure and social activities.

Table 4.11. Indicates the Crosstabulation of GDS level and Independence, control over life, freedom.

GDS level * Independence Level Crosstabulation
Geriatric Depression Scale		Independence Level			Total
		Good	Moderate	Poor
Low	Frequency	7	9	0	16
	Percentage	23.3%	30.0%	0.0%	53.3%
Medium	Frequency	1	8	0	9
	Percentage	3.3%	26.7%	0.0%	30.0%
High	Frequency	1	2	2	5
	Percentage	3.3%	6.7%	6.7%	16.7%

The above data interprets that in 30.0% of respondents with low GDS level have moderate level in Independence, control over life, freedom. 6.7% of respondents with High GDS level have moderate level and poor level in Independence, control over life, freedom

Table 4.12. Indicates the Crosstabulation of GDS level and Home and Neighbourhood

GDS level * Home and Neighbourhood level
Crosstabulation
Geriatric Depression Scale		Home and Neighbourhood level		Total
		Good	Moderate
Low	Frequency	13	3	16
	Percentage	43.3%	10.0%	53.3%

	Percentage	16.7%	13.3%	30.0%
High	Frequency	0	5	5
	Percentage	0.0%	16.7%	16.7%

The above data interprets that in 43.3% of respondents with low GDS level have good level in home and neighbourhood. 16.7% of respondents with high GDS level have moderate level in home and neighbourhood. There is no respondents have poor level in home and neighbourhood

Table 4.13. Indicates the Crosstabulation of GDS level and Psychological and emotional wellbeing.

GDS level * Psychological Level Crosstabulation
Geriatric Depression Scale		Psychological Level			Total
		Good	Moderate	Poor
Low	Frequency	13	2	1	16
	Percentage	43.3%	6.7%	3.3%	53.3%
Medium	Frequency	6	3	0	9
	Percentage	20.0%	10.0%	0.0%	30.0%
High	Frequency	0	5	0	5
	Percentage	0.0%	16.7%	0.0%	16.7%

The above data interprets that in 43.3% of the respondents with low GDS level have good level in Psychological and emotional well-being. 20% of respondent with medium GDS level have good level in Psychological and emotional well-being. 16.7% of the respondents with high GDS level have moderate Psychological and emotional well-being.

Table 4.14. Indicates the Crosstabulation of GDS level and financial circumstances.

GDS level * Finance Level Crosstabulation
Geriatric Depression Scale		Finance Level			Total
		Good	Moderate	Poor

High	Frequency	1	2	2	5
	Percentage	3.3%	6.7%	6.7%	16.7%

The data interprets that in 36.7% of the respondents with low GDS level have good level in financial circumstances. 20.0% of the respondents with medium GDS level also have good level in financial circumstances. 6.7% of the respondents with high GDS level have poor level in financial circumstances.

Table 4.15. Indicates the Crosstabulation of GDS level and Religion and Culture.

GDS level * Religion and Culture Level Crosstabulation
Geriatric Depression Scale		Religion and Culture Level			Total
		Good	Moderate	Poor

High	Frequency	0	4	1	5
	Percentage	0.0%	13.3%	3.3%	16.7%

The data interprets that 33.3% of the respondents with low GDS level have good level in QOL. 20.0% of the respondents have low and medium GDS level with moderate QOL.

Table 4.17. showing the One-way Anova for Geriatric Depression and Total Quality of life based on Age among respondents

Dependent Variable	Age (Years)	N	Mean	SD	f value	p value
Geriatric Depression	60-70	25	20.8	3.708	1.157	0.33
	71-80	2	24	2.828
	81 & above	3	19	2.646
Total Quality of Life	60-70	25	89.6	17.79279	0.082	0.922
	71-80	2	90.5	23.33452
	81 & above	3	85.3333	15.17674

Ho1: There is no significant difference among the respondents with Age Level (60-70, 71-80, 81 & above) with regards to Geriatric Depression.

Ho2: There is no significant difference among the respondents with Age Level (60-70, 71-80, 81 & above) with regards to Total Quality of Life.

A One-way ANOVA was conducted to compare the Geriatric Depression and Age. The value of f is 1.157, which reaches significance with a p-value of .330 (which is greater than 0.05alpha level). There is no significant difference in the Geriatric Depression and Age level (60-70 years of Age level (M= 20.80 S.D. = 3.708), 71-80 years of Age level (M= 24.00 S.D. = 2.828), 81 years & above Age level (M= 19.00 S.D. = 2.646). Hence the null hypothesis is accepted. However, it is observed that, with respect to 71-80 years of age have a higher mean score of 24.00.

A One-way ANOVA was conducted to compare the Total Quality of life and Age. The value of f is .082, which reaches significance with a p-value of .922 (which is greater than 0.05alpha level). There is no significant difference in the Total Quality of life and Age level (60-70 Age Category (M= 89.6000 S.D. = 17.79279), 71-80 Age Category (M= 90.5000 S.D. = 23.33452), 81 & above (M= 85.3333 S.D. = 15.17674). Hence the null hypothesis is accepted. However, it is observed that, with respect to 71-80 years of age have a higher mean score of 90.5000.

Table 4.18. showing the t test for Geriatric depression, Total quality of life based on Gender among respondents

Dependent Variable	Gender	N	Mean	SD	t value	p value
Geriatric Depression	Male	13	19.69	2.394	-1.541	.135
	Female	17	21.71	4.210
Total Quality of Life	Male	13	86.0769	13.95506	-.871	.391
	Female	17	91.6471	19.50942

Ho3: There is no significant difference between Geriatric Depression and Gender.

Ho4: There is no significant difference between Total Quality of Life and Gender.

An independent- sample t-test was conducted to compare Geriatric Depression and Gender. There is no significant difference in the scores of Male (M=19.69, SD=2.394) and of Female (M=21.71, SD=4.210), with $t=-1.541$, $p=.135$. Hence the null hypothesis is accepted. However, is observed that with respect to Geriatric Depression, the female has a higher mean score of 21.71 compared to Male with the mean score of 19.69.

An independent- sample t-test was conducted to compare Total Quality of Life and Gender. There is no significant difference in the scores of Male (M=86.0769, SD=13.95506) and of Female (M=91.6471, SD=19.50942), with $t = -.871$, $p = .391$. Hence the null hypothesis is accepted. However, is observed that with respect to Total Quality of Life, the female has a higher mean score of 91.6471 compared to Male with the mean score of 86.0769.

Table 4.19. showing the t test for Social relationship, Home & neighbourhood and Total Quality of life based on Nature of family among respondents

Dependent Variable	Nature of Family	N	Mean	SD	t value	p value
Social Relationship (Dimension of QoL)	Nuclear	17	24.06	3.976	2.524	0.018
	Joint	13	21.08	1.706
Home and Neighbourhood (Dimension of QoL)	Nuclear	17	9.88	2.781	2.506	0.018
	Joint	13	7.62	1.938
Total Quality of Life	Nuclear	17	94.7647	19.35048	2.123	0.043
	Joint	13	82.0000	11.04536

Ho5: There is no significant difference between Social Relationship and Nature of Family.

Ho6: There is no significant difference between Home & Neighbourhood and Nature of Family.

Ho7: There is no significant difference between Total Quality of Life and Nature of Family.

An independent- sample t-test was conducted to compare Social Relationship and Nature of Family. There is a significant difference in the scores for Nuclear Family ($M=24.06$, $SD=3.976$) and for the Joint Family ($M=21.08$, $SD=1.706$), with $t=2.524$, $p=0.018$. Hence null hypothesis is rejected.

An independent- sample t-test was conducted to compare Home and Neighbourhood and Nature of Family. There is a significant difference in the scores for Nuclear Family ($M=9.88$, $SD=2.781$) and for the Joint Family ($M=7.62$, $SD=1.938$), with $t=2.506$, $p=0.018$. Hence null hypothesis is rejected.

An independent- sample t-test was conducted to compare Quality of Life and Nature of Family. There is a significant difference in the scores for Nuclear Family ($M=94.7647$, $SD=19.35048$) and for the Joint Family ($M=82.0000$, $SD=11.04536$), with $t=2.123$, $p=0.043$. Hence null hypothesis is rejected.

Pearson correlation shows that there is a low positive significant ($r = .457$) correlation at 0.05 level between health and life overall. The correlation test to understand the relationship between social relationship & life overall showed moderate positive significant at 0.01 level with r score of 0.514. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .524$) correlation at 0.01 level between independence and life overall. The correlation test to understand the relationship between home and neighbourhood & life overall showed low positive significant at 0.05 level with r score of 0.435. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .595$) correlation at 0.01 level between psychological and life overall. The correlation test to understand the relationship between financial circumstances & life overall showed moderate positive significant correlation at 0.01 level with r score of 0.51. There is a high positive significant ($r = .817$) correlation at 0.01 level between total quality of life and life overall. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .672$) correlation at 0.01 level between Total geriatric depression and life overall. The correlation test to understand the relationship between total quality of life and health showed low positive significant at 0.05 level with r score of 0.389. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .602$) correlation at 0.01 level between geriatric depression and health. The correlation test to understand the relationship between independence and social relationship showed low positive significant at 0.05 level with r score of 0.428. There is a very moderate positive significant ($r = .541$) correlation at 0.01 level between total home, neighbourhood and social relationship. The correlation test to understand the relationship between Psychological and social relationship needs showed moderate positive significant at 0.01 level with r score of .560. There is a low positive significant ($r = .49$) correlation at 0.01 level between financial circumstances and social relationship. The correlation test to understand the relationship between total quality of life and social relationship showed high positive significant at 0.01 level with r score of .731. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .410$) correlation at 0.05 level between total geriatric depression and social relationship. The correlation test to understand the relationship between home, neighbourhood and independence showed moderate positive significant at 0.01 level with r score of .634. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .612$) correlation at 0.01 level between psychological and independence. The correlation test to understand the relationship between total quality of life and independence showed high positive significant at 0.01 level with r score of .702. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .524$) correlation at 0.01 level between total geriatric depression and independence. The correlation test to understand the relationship between psychological and home, neighbourhood showed moderate positive significant at 0.01 level with r score of .666. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .552$) correlation at 0.01 level between financial circumstances and home and neighbourhood. The correlation test to understand the relationship between total quality of life and home, neighbourhood showed high positive significant at 0.01 level with r score of .758. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .532$) correlation at 0.01 level between total quality of life and home, neighbourhood. The correlation test to understand the relationship between financial circumstances and psychological showed low positive significant at 0.05 level with r score of .439. There is a high positive significant ($r = .826$) correlation at 0.01 level between total quality of life and psychology. The correlation test to understand the relationship between total geriatric depression and psychological showed moderate positive significant at 0.01 level with r score of .579. There is a moderate positive significant ($r = .695$) correlation at 0.01 level between total quality of life and financial circumstances. The correlation test to understand the relationship between total geriatric depression and total quality of life showed high positive significant at 0.01 level with r score of .708.

CHAPTER- 5

MAJOR FINDINGS AND

SUGGESTIONS

MAJOR FINDINGS AND SUGGESTIONS

Related to socio demographic profile:

- The majority 83.3 percent of the respondents fall in the age group between 60 to 70 years. Only 10 percent of the respondents fall in the age group of 81 and above.
- 56.7 percent of the respondents are female. 43.3 percent of the respondents are Male.
- 66.7 percent of the respondents are married. 33.3 percent of the respondents are widow.
- 56.7 percent of the respondents belong to nuclear family. 43.4% percent of the respondents belong to Joint family.
- 40 percent of the respondents belong to Urban. 60 percent of the respondents belong to Rural.

Findings related to Geriatric depression:

- 53.3 percent of the respondents have low level of Geriatric Depression.
- 30 percent of the respondents have medium level of Geriatric Depression.
- 16.7 percent of the respondents have high level of Geriatric Depression.
- There is no significant difference among the respondents with Age Level (60-70, 71-80, 81 & above) with regards to Geriatric Depression.
- There is no significant difference between Geriatric Depression and Gender.

Findings related to Quality of Life:

- 43.3 percent of the respondents have good quality of life.
- 53.3 percent of the respondents have a moderate quality of life.
- 3.3 percent of the respondents have a poor quality of life.
- There is no significant difference among the respondents with Age Level (60-70, 71-80, 81 & above) with regards to Total Quality of Life.
- There is no significant difference between Total Quality of Life and Gender.
- There is a significant difference between Social Relationship (Dimension of QoL) and Nature of Family.
- There is a significant difference between Home & Neighbourhood (Dimension of QoL) and Nature of Family.
- There is a significant difference between Total Quality of Life and Nature of Family.

Related to Geriatric depression and Quality of life:

- Out of 53.3 percent of respondents with low geriatric depression, 33.3 percent have good quality of life and 20 percent have moderate quality of life. None of the respondents have poor quality of life.
- Out of 30 percent of respondents with medium geriatric depression, 10 percent have good quality of life and 20 percent have moderate quality of life. None of the respondents have poor quality of life.
- Out of 16.7 percent of respondents with high geriatric depression, 13.3 percent of respondents have moderate quality of life and 3.3 percent of respondents have poor quality of life. None of the respondents have good quality of life.

Suggestions & Conclusion:

1. The quality of life of elderly can be improved in the area of social relationship and activity by involving them in routine happenings in the family and creating specific leisure activities which they would enjoy.
2. Their independence and freedom can be improved by involving them in decision making and allow them to have control over their life unless it is harmful.
3. Elderly people can be psycho educated in preparing and managing retirement life economically socially and psychologically.
4. Counselling can be given to geriatric people to find the value of integrity and meaning to life.
5. Adolescence and young couple can be made aware of ways to meaningfully engaged with elderly people in the family.
6. Supportive environment for elderly plays a major role in determining better quality of life. Depression can be prevented by improving the elderly population's quality of life.

INTRODUCTION

The Institute of Mental Health (IMH) in Kilpauk, Chennai is one of the oldest and largest centres offering psychiatric care in South Asia.

Surrounded by a thick blanket of trees and greenery amid the concrete jungle of Chennai, the IMH, which is spread over 60 acres, offers more than what meets the eye. It has adopted various new techniques and initiated many schemes for the wellness of its residents.

Dr M Malaiappan, professor of psychiatry at Madras Medical College and currently the director of IMH, said they are planning to turn the institute into a centre of excellence in psychiatric care.

“New proposals are sanctioned by the government for developing manpower in the area of mental health. In the future, it will be an integrated centre for primary psychiatric care, acute hospital care, and community care in psychiatry. In addition, it will be a centre for rehabilitation also. So, all the facets of psychiatric care will be under one roof and the IMH will be a nodal centre for psychiatric care in Tamil Nadu,” he said.

Dr P Poorna Chandrika, former IMH director and currently a professor at the institute, said the over two-century-old institute was founded by the East India Company in 1795, as “a place for keeping people of unsound minds. It was more like an asylum, a custodial care.”

She noted that the progress in mental health management has been the biggest takeaway for her. She also talked about how even the usage of terminologies like inmates and warders has changed over the years.

“Warders are found in prison. Here, they are not referred to as warders anymore, they are called ‘attenders’. Also, patients are not referred to as inmates, which is again a term used in prison. Here they are called either residents or patients as we don’t want them to get a feeling that they are in custodial care,” she said.

Dr Chandrika added that the Mental Health Act of 2017 spurred them to adopt various schemes and projects.

“The Act insisted on one point – rehabilitation – so that they (mentally challenged people) can be placed into the community, they can sustain themselves along with the support from us. This made us do more projects. The first step was to send a few of our patients/residents/clients, who improved with treatment, to work in the DMS (Directorate of Medical and Rural Health Services) on a contract basis. They enjoyed the work so much that they never took leave. They told me they like going to work.

“So later, we picked some of these people from their previous wards which had chronic patients and placed them in a ward that constituted only working patients. So it became more of a hostel wherein they had their TV, mobile phones, and even independence to send money to their relatives. Those things made them feel good. Even when we ask them why they wish to send money to someone who turned them away, they say that they still see that person as their brother or sister and they still have to look after them,” she said.

The institute has 24 wards for men and women. Currently, it has close to 800-900 residents but the number may change depending on the ‘floating population’ count. On an average day, the IMH gets about 20-30 patients. It has a facility guarded by armed personnel in which people with criminal backgrounds are lodged. There is also an alcohol-deaddiction ward. The institute has facilities near the outpatient ward for attendees to stay with the patient.

The IMH has about 19 medical officers (assistant professors), six professors, 140 staff nurses, 90 male attendees, 30 female attendees, and seven social welfare officers, apart from staff employed on a contractual basis.

Further, interns and volunteers from NGOs also chip in from time to time to take care of the residents. The institute has a functioning yoga unit. After morning medications, the residents are encouraged to spend time at the yoga class as well. For those interested in gardening, there is a separate space.

with dedication, and once they get a hang of some work, they tend to finish it with perfection.

Cassava, plantain, bottle gourd, snake gourd, and a couple of fruits are some of the varieties grown here in large numbers.

“There are about five gardeners here. We try to bring patients who are capable of doing outside work. First, I try to befriend them. I will sip tea or coffee with them, show them compassion, and make them believe that I am their friend and not some instructor. Slowly, I try to teach them some light work and send them back in time for lunch. I have been doing this for almost 16 years now. I feel really happy when I get to hear that the person who worked with me a day before has been discharged and he is back with his family,” he said.

The residents also have an art therapist to help them. Porkodi Pazhaniappan, a certified art therapist who has been with the institute for close to three years, said they use art as a means of treatment.

We bring art as a modality of treatment. We do this twice a week; we use all kinds of art therapy like painting, movement therapy, singing, storytelling, drumming circle, etc. We see a lot of progress happening even during these sessions,” she noted.

Further, those interested in sports are encouraged to participate in games like running, shot put, and long jump. Dr Sangeetha, a dental surgeon, along with her team are working day in and out to prepare the residents to take part in competitions. Close to 15 residents from the IMH participated in the 17th state-level Para Athletics Championship for adults in 2021 and nine of them won medals.

Among the many projects initiated for the well-being of the residents, RVIVE Café is one. The café is a collaborative initiative of the IMH and the Hot Breads and is located in the institute's outpatient wing.

“During Covid-19, as you may know, everything stopped. There was no transport for our residents to go to work and come back. On one occasion, M Mahadevan (founder of Hot Breads) said why can't we set up a café here so residents can work and stay here. We started the process and the health minister (Ma Subramanian) inaugurated the café,” Chandrika said.

Another initiative of the IMH was facilitating the residents to exercise their democratic rights. Chandrika said many NGOs including the Disability Rights Alliance (DRA) came together for this cause. The institute helped its residents to vote in the 2019 Lok Sabha and 2021 Tamil Nadu Assembly polls.

“It was a huge exercise; a lot of paperwork was involved. After a screening process was conducted to ascertain their decision-making capacity, around 156 residents were declared eligible to vote. They got a separate booth. Various organisations volunteered to educate the residents about their rights and explained to them how an EVM machine works, etc. The Chennai civic body also conducted a mock demo. They all got their voter IDs with the IMH as their residential address, which they can change once they move out of this place,” she added. 2022 -2023

In the first such case at the IMH, a wedding of two residents also took place during the directorship of Dr Chandrika.

P Mahendran, 42, and Deepa, 36, two strangers who were admitted to the institute about two years ago, formed a bond and shared a dream of living together. In October 2022, the duo got married at a local temple. The wedding was widely celebrated both inside and outside the campus as caretakers and workers at the hospital were all excited and dressed up for the occasion. The media also spread the news across the country.

“I think Mahendran was working in Daycare while Deepa was in RVIVE Café. After I came to know that two of our patients are always together, I called Deepa and spoke to her. She said there is no one for them and she wants to marry Mahendran. She had clarity and said with conviction that she wishes to have Mahendran as her life partner. I believed her and thought we should fulfill their wish. But we didn’t know how to proceed with this... There are a lot of protocols, right?

“They wanted their marriage to happen as per the Hindu tradition. As they say, when you wish to make a good thing happen, the whole universe will come together. People helped us get the mangal sutra and the wedding dress. From the health minister to the local MLA, everyone came together to wish them... In all my years here, I had never seen such a thing,

1.3. Curriculum enrichment even a special buffet lunch was arranged for everyone here at the auditorium,” she added. 2022 -2023 per the health minister’s order, Mahendran is now employed as a ward manager, taking care of insurance and other paper-related works of residents.

Talking about the IMH’s halfway home, a centre for residents whose families are not ready to take them back, Chandrika said there are about four other halfway homes across the state. To further provide employment opportunities to its residents, the institute partnered with Crystal, an outsourcing agency, and some of the residents (as many as 18) who were staying at the TMH for several years have been employed by the company. All such residents have individual bank accounts.

Once we give them financial independence, we can see how they change. Some of our female residents went shopping and purchased some gold earrings... We are happy for them but at the same time keep telling them to save their money,” Chandrika said.

The residents are encouraged to showcase their talent and numerous paintings and products made by them like jute bags, purses, holders, and cloth bags, have been kept near the entrance of the institute. The residents are trained by instructors and some of their works are even showcased in exhibitions.

In August 2021, as a step to promote inclusivity, the institute employed members from the transgender community.

“During an interaction with them (members of the transgender community), they said if they are provided with a job, they wouldn’t have to get involved in commercial sex work. So we and till now we haven't received any complaints from residents or others whatsoever. When we appointed them, I was asked whether we should keep them in the inpatient ward as there will be less interaction with the public but I was not okay with that idea. We employed them in the outpatient ward as it will provide them with the confidence to face the public not just here but even in other places," Chandrika said.

Also, after learning that patients and their attendees have to take a long walk and cross the road to take printouts for various purposes, an NGO donated a printer and a photocopier to the TMH – which are now manned by a recovered patient of the institute.

The institute is also part of the Paravai (Personal Attitude Reformation Assistance Venture Affirming Identity) Project, a joint initiative of the Greater Chennai police, social welfare and prison departments to rehabilitate young first-time offenders in the city. The institute offers necessary treatment and counselling to young offenders.

When asked how they react in situations wherein the family doesn't want to take back the residents even after the latter got cured, Dr Chandrika said she used to initially get angry.

"But now, with all the programmes and initiatives, I know I can accommodate this person (resident) somewhere safe. Even now, many patients, who got cured and were sent along with a family member, turn up again at the gates of the IMH, saying their family didn't take care of them well. We then follow due procedure, get the approval from the family and accommodate these people here... The government has come up with many facilities, and treatment methods have changed. I wish to see more shelter, residential, and halfway homes, and greater awareness among the public regarding mental health," she said.
